Situation at the Front

DENVER August 29 — A telegram from Meeker to Courier to Glenwood says information has been received that at Thursday's battle with Colorow three Indians were killed instead of two and four wounded, and seven Indians and squaws killed and five wounded. There has been no fighting since Thursday, but over 600 Indians are camped within a miles of the troops and ready to fight at the least provocation. The loss of nearly 300 ponies and their squaws has made them wild and they are ready for revenge. Colorow says he can get "cheap ammunition from White river," Uncompahgre, Uncompahgre Navajo who are young and want cheap fight, and unless white men go back Colorow for the If he should and make an attack it is said settlers estimate it will take the combined effort of two thousand regulars to Indians

Opinion of War.

DENVER, August 29.—A Glenwood Springs special to the Times says: Nothing from the camp Rangely for the past 24 hours. A population of at Camp Adams writes as follows: "As near as I can judge, the war has now fairly begun. The Utes will gather from 700 to 800 warriors and will read the word, fighting to the bitter end." An officer of the United States army, who saw our boys at Rangely, says only squaws, old men and papooses are left on either reservation. The failure to hear from the front may be due to the fact that notwithstanding sufficient assistance be secured to justify transmission to Headquarters, or a courier may have been cut off or delayed by Indians. General Crook and Agent Byrnes will join Governor Adams at Meeker on Wednesday. If they expect to arrange for the dell ery of Colorow and the two murderers Dalhamer mission will be a fruitless one.

Situation at the Front

RANGELY, Colo., August 28, via Glenwood August 29.—The situation here is unchanged as far as war features are concerned. The Indians are still in force on the battle ground near the reservation, with lookouts on the surrounding peaks. About 250 ponies were captured by the boys, but about 100 have escaped. Some of them were claimed by Meeker who were allowed to take them away. Major Leslie and Kendall are holding the position waiting reinforcements, supplies and ammunition. It is thought the Indians will not make an attack unless they command under Chief to retreat with the ponies. The were found in the bushes in the bottoms yesterday, which had been overlooked. It is clear from appearances two had been killed outright and the others died of their wounds. One of the boys of Company C named Hotchkiss, of Denver was hit during the fight and severely. Lieutenant Meeker this morning. Major Dresser gave out and he roped an Indian pony and mounted him. He succeeded in approaching the Ute horse to secure it the animal turned and gave him a hard kick in the chest. Many of the men are hoarse. They are mostly volunteers from Denver and eleven men belonging to Pritchard's scouts left yesterday. They did good service during the engagement and are discouraging to the citizens here.

The Situation is Really Critical

There are enough Indians within a half hour's ride to wipe out the entire command. Three unoccupied cabins here are used for officers and hospital quarters. There are about 500 Indians in front of us and if the fight should be renewed it will take 2,000 men to dislodge them. For the past two days rations and ammunition have been coming in from the rear and the boys are getting in better spirits. All of the settlers in the country are gathered here and several hundred have sent word to the boys to stay by us and we will have a thousand men here in a few days to relieve them. One settler man known by no other name than Curley is missing. It is thought he came from Leadville. Word was sent in by the Utes that they had

R. W. SIGLE,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

The recent trouble with the Utes has only one agreeable phase. It has demonstrated that the Colorado National Guard is composed of brave men. Their conduct throughout the whole trouble has been in every way praiseworthy. The only regret is that this demonstration was made at the cost of human life.

It is said that the late Alvan Clark prided himself more as a miniature portrait painter than as a maker of telescope lenses. Whatever reputation he had as the former he shared with a great many other ordinary painters. As the latter he had no peer. It simply illustrates the fact that a man cannot always trust his own judgment—not himself.

If the advice given last Sunday in the GAZETTE had been followed Lieutenant Foloer would be alive and the frontier as well protected as it is now. If the troops are allowed to stay on the edge of the reservation holding ponies taken from the Indians, and if Randlett is allowed to send his warlike dispatches from the war, there is likely to be more trouble. The governor should, call in the troops immediately.

Gen. Reardon would go himself to the front, if he is anxious to fight. His staff [illegible] wants no guards for [illegible] the very [illegible] reinforced.

We do not believe the governor [illegible] the troops home he is [illegible] we are playing [illegible] high [illegible] January. If General Randlett's [illegible] in the field. The [illegible] is [illegible] by the [illegible] in all [illegible] many of the Indians [illegible] by [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] It is [illegible] dy, which [illegible] of [illegible] Arnold end. If all the [illegible] of [illegible] the fighting at [illegible] ordered home it [illegible] quiet again.

The Hon. Henry B. Metcalf of Rhode Island, who by always [illegible] exhibitionist, has written a very forcible letter to Dr. M[illegible] regarding the advisability of a prohibition party. He [illegible] that it will simply result in bringing into [illegible] a party that was always opposed to prohibition. In the last seven years, [illegible] Blaine [illegible] have voted on the [illegible] Issue. There [illegible] one hundred and [illegible] and plurality for [illegible] they also [illegible] almost one hundred and eighty thousand majority for prohibition. The full prohibition vote of the states was 901,240. They only gave St. John 49,081. This shows that [illegible] or the 850,000 in these [illegible] states believe that prohibition [illegible] helped by putting up a separate [illegible] national ticket. This majority is so great that [illegible] it is useless. A [illegible] politician who [illegible] ought to [illegible] suit to it.

The following dispatch was sent Saturday by General Charles Adams of Manitou to General Adams:

OURAY, August 27.

[illegible] day.

If hostilities have not been actually [illegible], if you desire to avert a perilous war and great expense to our state send if you wish me to do so I will go [illegible] and Colorow and I think I can [illegible] in having him leave Colorado forever and perhaps give up the two Indians. If within the border of the state Telegraph your wishes. Can reach Meeker easily from here via Grand Junction. My business permits.

CHARLES ADAMS.

General Adams went alone in 1879 with a guard of a few Uncompahgre Utes into the hostile camp of the White River Utes and recovered the women who were captured at Meeker agency. What he says in this dispatch is not an idle boast. He would have performed all that he promised to. If the governor had only committed a man like General Adams to Meeker calling out the state troops not only would the state have been saved a great expense, but Jack Wand's wife would not be a widow or his children fatherless nor would Mrs. Folsom be weeping for the son who is not. Next time the governor should not consult a lot of men who are anxious for a little prominence as sutlers and quartermasters.

The News undertakes by a good deal of specious pleading to justify the calling out of troops. It is now shedding a good many hypocritical tears over the death of two brave men who were unnecessarily sacrificed. But no specious pleading will not influence the level headed people of this state. It was generally felt that the governor committed a blunder when he called out the state troops, and it was known that he had blundered when three or four days afterward the statement of facts on which he made his call was found to be absolutely false. We then knew there never was any need of the state troops. After Manager Thatcher knew he had been deceived he never should have allowed the troops to have taken the field. Such a fatal mistake must inevitable a war which Colorow was anxious to avert. The Indians were on the way to their reservation when they were unduly stopped and forced to fight. If the troops had not been in the field Kendall would have failed to have found Colorow, and Colorow would have safely reached the reservation. The general government would right to arrange to put troops in the field. Under the circumstances there was no need of them. All that was necessary to do was to have called off Randall and kept the troops at Meeker. A good man like General Adams would have settled the whole matter in a few days and settled it so that it would be finally settled without bloodshed. The blood of the two brave men who fell the victims of a two days' needless fight will be forever on the head of Governor Routt.
